

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An examination scheduling program for a nuclear medical examination apparatus for causing a computer to create a schedule for each patient including an examination
5 by the nuclear medical examination apparatus and a medication accompanying the examination. The program includes a step of fetching information on contents of the examination for each patient and an order of examinations, and a step of creating an examination schedule to avoid 10 overlapping in time of timing of the medication and the examinations according to the information on the contents of the examination and the order of examinations, while maintaining fixed a waiting time from the medication to the examination set for each patient according to a type of 15 examination.